

Love design? We do — as verb and noun.

We think of design as both a process... and a solution.

We have created DesignLove to share ideas and things and places found and people met over our lifelong journey together.

To share our enjoyment of very special things, of people's thoughtful and inventive problem-solving, of form and function, of the visual & the tactile... with images and interviews, words and experiences... of things we marvel at, things we love.

We share with others through this DesignLove platform, which reflects and explores our passion and excitement about objects and places and people and experiences that do what they do beautifully.

We love design; we love the discovery of the people and their creations. What is their journey? What inspired them to make this?

We want to share what we have learned from the people we have met along the way. A work of art, a building, a perfect bowl or cup, a toy — beauty in everyday things.

There are stories and life in the objects we live with, large and small, fancy and plain, “important” and whimsical. When good design comes into your life, your story expands too.

Design celebrates life. Come explore with us. And fall in love.
